

Nisha Singh

CMS20BF0015 (1st sem)SECTION-A

1. The constitution of India originally stated that the supreme court of India would be composed of the chief justice and seven other judges. The number of judges changed to 10 in 1956, 17 in 1977 and 25 in 1985. currently, there are 30 other judges in supreme court besides chief justice of the supreme court.
3. The chief justice and judges of other high courts are to be appointed by the president under clause 1 of Article 217 of the constitution. Appointments to the high courts should be made on time bound schedule so that the appointments are made well in advance before the occurrence of the anticipated vacancy.
5. Members of Rajya Sabha are elected by the elected members of the Assemblies of the states and union territories in accordance with the system of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote.

7. The main features of the cabinet are:

- (i) The party which secures majority seats in Lok Sabha forms the government.
 - (ii) The president is the nominal executive while the prime Minister is the real executive.
-

4. The appellate jurisdiction of Supreme court for civil cases are -

- (i) An appeal shall lie to the Supreme court from any judgment, decree or final order in a civil proceeding of a high court in the territory of India.
 - (ii) The case involves a substantial question of law of general importance and the opinion of high court that said questions need to be decided by the Supreme court.
-

SECTION-C

16. The functions of supreme court in India are:

(i) Jurisdiction -

As the court of last resort, the Supreme court hears appeals from judgments or rulings rendered by the high courts, the patent court, and the appellate panels of the District courts.

(ii) Composition -

The Supreme court is comprised of the chief justice and 13 Justices. The chief justice then appoints one justice as the Minister of National Court Administration.

(iii) Exercise of Jurisdiction -

The jurisdiction of the Supreme court is exercised at the Grand Bench. It is convened with more than two-thirds of all the justices with chief justice presiding.

(iv) Judicial Administration -

Judicial Administration is the administrative management affairs including organization, human resources, budgets, which are necessary to operate the judiciary.

(v) Power to establish rules and regulations -

The supreme court may establish rules and regulations, under its judicial law-making powers, concerning judicial proceedings - discipline within the courts or management of business insofar as they are not contrary to law.

A person is qualified for appointment as a judge of supreme court, only he/she a citizen of India can be.

(a) He/she has been for at least five years a judge of high court or two or more than two such courts.

(b) He/she has been for at least ten years an advocate of a high court.

(c) He/she must be in the opinion of the president and a distinguished jurist.

SECTION - B

9. A bicameral system describes a government that has a two-house legislative system, such as the House of Representatives and the Senate that make up the U.S. Congress. ~~The world bicameral~~ The British parliament, a bicameral system, has been the model for most parliamentary systems around the world. It can be contrasted with a unicameral system, in which all members of the legislature deliberate and vote as a single group.
-

13. The functions of security council related to world peace are:

- (i) To maintain international peace and security in accordance with the principles and purposes of the UN.
- (ii) To investigate any dispute or situation that might lead to friction and to recommend methods of adjusting disputes.
- (iii) To determine the existence of a threat to the peace or an act of aggression and to recommend what action should be taken.

iv) to take military action against an aggressor.

(v) to formulate plans for the establishment of a system to regulate armaments.

14. Panchayati Raj system functions as a system of governance in which gram panchayats are the basic units of local administration. The system has three levels - Gram panchayat, Panchayat samiti and Zila Panchayat. It exists in all states except Nagaland, Meghalaya and Mizoram. The Panchayati Raj system receive funds from local body grants by the Central Finance Commission, Funds released by the state governments on the recommendations of the State Finance Commissions.

12. The powers of Central government and State government are:

Central government -

i) States must exercise their executive power in compliance with the laws made by the central government under Article 356.

(ii) It has power to take all measures as it seems necessary for the purpose of protecting and improving the quality of the environment.

(iii) It also has power to take over the state, in matters related to national security.

State Government -

(i) The state shall consult the commission in relation to any proposed legislation.

(ii) The state shall be entitled to issue policy directions concerning the subsidies to be allowed for supply of electricity to any class or classes of persons.

(iii) The state shall have power to issue policy directions on matters of state planning.
